

Abstract

A system and a method for enabling existing short range wireless access points to participate within a coordinated networked environment through the use of adapters that extend the access points' capabilities, implement policies, and perform other operations.